

was allowed were not sufficient to keep out the cold. It was in the kitchen that Dement locked her when he went out to work. Then he locked the door that opens from the bedroom to the hall, leaving his prisoner confined behind two sets of locks and bolts.

"I met Frank Dement soon after I came to Washington, when I was living with Mrs. Dobson, on Twenty-fourth street," said the poor girl. "That was nine months ago. I had brought my little girl with me from Frederick, Md. to the city, in the hope that I would find work. My first husband had been dead some time. Frank seemed to like me. He said he loved me, and took me around to places and showed me a good time. He seemed to like Adelle, too, and that made me happy and I liked him that more for it. When he asked me to live with him and told me he would marry me, I thought it would be all right.

"You see, I loved him. I have no education and knew nothing of Washington. I had lived all my life in Frederick and I believed what was told me. When he brought a license and said we were married I believed that, although now I can see how foolish it was. But, of course, I was foolish, for I loved him much. For three weeks he was good to me. Why, he hardly beat me at all, and when he did I did not mind. He was jealous, though, of every man he saw when I was around. When we would walk out together in the evening he would make me keep my eyes on the ground; when I happened to look up he would say I was trying to flirt with the men in the street.

"Then we moved, in the night. I don't know where this second house was—on what street, or in what section of the city. I have never had a chance to learn anything of Washington. In this house my imprisonment began. Whenever Frank left the house he locked me in. Almost always when he came back he would beat me.

Compelled to Move.

"The people in this house were mad because of the way he treated me and we had to leave. We went to Mrs. Wheeler's at 1012 H street northwest. It was the same thing here. I was locked in the room during the day and beaten at night. I never went out. On Sundays Frank always stayed at home, and it seemed to me he stayed for the pleasure of beating me.

"Sometimes he accused me of trying to flirt with other men and beat me for that. Sometimes he said I had tried to get out of the door, and beat me for that. Sometimes he beat me for nothing at all—when he had not even charged me with anything. But always it was not for anything I had really done. I had done nothing.

"We went to another house also at night. This was kept by a Mrs. Pretwell, but I don't know where the house is. Then we came here. All the time the beatings went on. Frank would wake up in the night and beat me. He would say he had seen me trying to get out of the door.

"Seven weeks ago we came to this house. The doors were locked and the curtains drawn over the windows. I was in fear of my life, for many times he has told me he would kill me if I tried to get away or do anything that would hurt him. I was afraid to call out—to ask for help. The ladies here would have helped me, I know, as they did help me when I finally got courage enough to break from the room. But I was afraid. I knew Frank would kill me if I tried and failed.

"He had a photograph and he used to play that for hours at a time. While it played he would beat me. He has beaten me and then made me sing to the music of the photograph, so that people would not think he had been mean to me. He has beaten me for hours at a time. He would strike me in the breast, so that I could not breathe. He would wrap a towel around my mouth, so that I could not scream. I did not love him any longer, and I wanted to get away. When the chance came, I took it.

"Mrs. Wallace and her daughters have done what they could to make the girl comfortable. She is but twenty years old, and, as she says, knows nothing of Washington. Most of what she knows of the world she has learned from Frank Dement.

Still Feels Him.

Her fear of him is still active and intense—the vital and engrossing thought of her life. He has impressed himself upon her, so that his shadow is always over her. When she hears a footstep she thinks familiar she starts in dread. An unexpected noise makes her cower. She says she has not been able to sleep since her release.

Dement is still at the District jail, where he was taken after the preliminary trial in the Police Court yesterday morning. His bail was fixed at $1,700, which he has not been able to furnish. When he is asked as to the charges made against him in the woman's story he returns stony and surly denials.

"She is the biggest liar that ever lived," he declares.

But the bruises on her body and face and the face of her child tell their story with more eloquence and more convincing sincerity than words can supply.

RUNAWAY BOYS ARE SOUGHT BY POLICE

Detectives and police have been asked to maintain a lookout for three runaway boys. The lads are Theodore Hardy, fourteen; Robert B. McElroy, sixteen; and Lyman Moore, fifteen years of age.

Hardy took French leave from his home, 656 Morton place northeast, on Friday. His parents say they know of no reason why he should have left home.

The other lads are fugitives from the Junior Republic, at Annapolis, Md. Moore lives at 1228 Seventh street northwest, while McElroy's parents live in Portsmouth, Va.

It is believed that Moore and McElroy ran away together.

LOTTIE HAWKINS MUST ANSWER MURDER CHARGE

Lottie Hawkins will be placed on trial in Criminal Court No. 1 tomorrow on a charge of murder in the first degree. She is accused of the murder of her ten days' old child September 28 last by drowning it in the Potomac river.

Attorneys James E. McLaughlin and R. R. Horner will appear as counsel for the accused, and Assistant District Attorney Charles H. Turner will represent the Government.

OHIO REPUBLICANS SOUND WARNING

Lack of Party Loyalty Deplorable at Meeting.

Braggins New President

Much Enthusiasm Manifested by Officers Who Addressed the Hundred Members Present.

A significant echo of the disaster that befell the Republican party in Ohio last fall as a result of ultra-Coxism was heard at the annual meeting of the Association of Ohio Republicans in Washington, held last night at 419 Third street northwest, when Major F. H. Braggins, the newly elected president, sounded a note of warning to the members of the association as to the dangers that are confronting the party all over the country, and particularly in their native State. The failure of the Republican members of Congress to stand by the Administration and their party measures was deplored, and a feeling of political unrest, and dissatisfaction generally was noted.

Major Braggins was elected over William L. Symons, who has held the office the past year. Mr. Symons, a native of Cleveland, is a member of the pension board of appeals of the Treasury Department, and Major Braggins, also of Cleveland, at one time editor of the Cleveland Leader, is connected with the Ordnance Bureau of the War Department.

Vote of Thanks for Symons.

Followers of Mr. Symons praised the good work he had done for the organization, and, on the motion of the new president, the retiring official was given a hearty vote of thanks for the manner in which he had built the organization up during the past year.

Major Braggins, in the course of his address said: "The strength of the party in the past has been in united and harmonious action. That spirit is needed in these times, not only here in Washington, but at home, out in Ohio. There is diversity of opinion among our Senators and Representatives on which they heretofore have stood together. Let us do our part toward reuniting our forces both in official life as well as in private."

Much Enthusiasm Manifested.

Nearly all of the newly-elected officers were called upon for talks and much loyal enthusiasm for Ohio and the Republican party was expressed. The complete roster of the new officers is as follows, all except the president being elected by acclamation:

President, Major F. H. Braggins, Cleveland; first vice president, James W. Bell (re-election), London; second vice president, George P. Dunham, Wilmington; secretary, H. B. Gram (re-election); treasurer, George R. Morrison, Cadiz; treasurer, Charles E. Everett, Fremont; executive committee, W. Wood, Cincinnati; M. W. Stevenson, New Philadelphia; G. Hanna, Cleveland; Philip M. Ashford, Sallenville; Sydney J. Howell, Cincinnati.

The following were elected to membership: Francis M. Shore, Everett J. Towell, Wilson Oblinger, Minott E. Porter, Harry L. Mickey, Louis R. Klemm, Charles S. Grindie, Murray F. Snider, William E. Gardner, Bernard Spellbring, W. S. Pangburn, Bert C. Thomas, Arthur E. Fisher, Robert H. Wood, Stanley E. Wolf.

The reports showed the association to be in a prosperous condition and rapidly growing in numbers. Nearly 100 members were present.

COOK'S TARTS FOLLOW CLOSELY CUPID'S DARTS

CHICAGO, March 31.—Cupid, in the role of domestic science, will begin a crusade for pure food and good cooking among the senior co-eds of Northwestern University.

A cooking class, whose members will be only those seniors residing at Willard Hall who can show positive proof that they are engaged to be married is expected to be organized and conducted under the supervision of Miss Emma Ida Raitt, matron of the girls' boarding hall.

Each girl, before being allowed to join the class, will be required to show the matron her engagement ring and a signed love letter from a man whose existence can be proved.

DIED.

STIER—I. O. O. F.—The officers and members of the Grand Lodge, the Grand Encampment, and Fred D. Stier, Encampment No. 7, are called to meet at Odd Fellows Hall, Seventh street northwest, at 1 p. m., Monday, April 2, 1906, to attend the funeral of Grand Representative F. A. STIER. The officers and members of both Rebekah Lodge No. 2, will meet at Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, Ninth and K streets northwest, at 1:30 p. m.

HOW ARTISTS USE PEN AND INK LINES

FIFTH ARTICLE

This is the fifth of the series of articles on drawing which the Washington Sunday Times is publishing, with Charles Dana Gibson's pictures as illustrations. These are issued each Sunday as a supplement to these articles. Special art supplement each Sunday.

Admiration of brute strength, a primal quality of human nature, is strikingly illustrated in the Gibson Art Supplement with his Sunday's Times. Boys have in them more of the primitive man, unspurred or unrefined—by civilization than have their elders, and almost any boy would run a block to see Jim Jeffries or Bob Fitzsimmons. Hero-worship is strong in boys, and their heroes are the physically powerful rather than the spiritually or mentally great. It is this hero-worship which Gibson has drawn in his picture, "The Champion."

As a lesson to students of drawing this is full of meat. First of all, it is a splendid study of boys. Let the student examine each face and each figure critically; he will find many different types, but one emotion animating all the faces. There are tough little street gamins, the children of well-to-do people, overgrown gawks, lads who work and lads who play, but all are awed in admiration before "The Champion"—the giant with the bull's chest and bulldog's head, who towers above them conscious of their worship, rather bored by it, and too proud to show his appreciation by even a smile.

The free drawing of the group in the right foreground is worthy of close study. These figures have been sketched roughly in pencil and drawn rapidly and sketchily with the pen. It is an excellent example of free drawing, not to be copied line for line by any means, but to be studied for the way in which it suggests rather than portrays detail, and to be compared with the accuracy with which the central figure, that of "The Champion," is handled. His face is a fairly good portrait of Jeffries, force mingled with good nature, physical courage, with scarcely a trace of intelligence. His ear has lost its original shape through being battered and torn by the fists of his conquered opponents; his frock coat, his silk hat, his Ascot cravat and the gardenia in his button-hole are purchases made possible by a recent victory, and he is very conscious of the fine figure he cuts.

AGE OF CHILD WAS INCORRECTLY PRINTED

In the Health Office report of the deaths for the twenty-four hours ending Friday at noon, printed in The Times, the age of the infant of Joel and Edith M. Carpenter was given as twenty months. It should have been twenty minutes.

A Harmless, Quick and Certain Cure for Headache of Every Character

Neuralgia Brain Fatigue Alcoholic Excesses Nervousness Sleeplessness Rheumatic Pains Depression Melancholy Sea Sickness, etc. Especially Valuable in Sick and Nervous Headache.

It is a great mistake to suppose that a headache is of small account—very frequently it is the beginning of some serious ailment. Most often, however, it is the result of indigestion or nervousness (possibly both), and needs but the right remedy to give very quick relief—KEF IS THAT REMEDY, and meets a larger number of requirements for a SAFE AND CERTAIN headache cure than any other preparation of its kind on the market.

N. B. This matchless headache cure—KEF—is absolutely free from Opium, Chloral, Morphine, or other injurious or enslaving drugs. This is most important to every one using headache remedies. You want a remedy as safe as it is sure and one which can be taken under all circumstances. KEF IS THAT REMEDY.

We rest our reputation on its safety. It can be taken by the most delicate person, as it does not affect the heart.

Thornton's Grand Exhibit of Spring Footwear At Special Prices This Week

We have decided to make some special reductions on spring footwear this week, from the fact that the sale of oxfords has been greatly affected by the extreme bad weather for the past two weeks, yet our fine general trade would have reduced our stock had it not been for the many large shipments during that time. In consequence of which we deem it best to make considerable sacrifice in prices rather than to continue to double our stock.
